

wildlife
watch

www.wildlifewatch.org.uk

DEEP SLEEPER

Like many small animals, hazel dormice hibernate in winter. They curl up in nests on forest floors or at the bottom of hedges, sometimes 'sleeping' from October all the way through to May. In fact, they can spend nearly three-quarters of the year 'asleep' in some form!